PORTABLE TOILET SCHEDULE

There are a few factors to consider when trying determining how many toilets you will need. First is the number of people that are expected to attend. A good estimate is to figure one toilet for every 50-100 people you expect to attend.

If the event is expected to have a larger female attendance it is better to have about two for every 100 people. Females will require a little more time in the toilet and could cause a line of unhappy people.

An event that will be serving alcohol will also need to factor in extra toilets. A good estimate for an event that is serving a great deal of beverages is about one toilet for every 50 people expected to attend. It is important to plan ahead for the extra usage that will occur in this type of situation.

If the event location is very isolated extra toilets are a good idea. If people will be making the event an all day or all night excursions, they will not have the option of waiting until they get home to use a restroom. The length of the event also plays a role in determining how many toilets you will need. A portable toilet can sustain regular use for about six hours, before needing emptying.

Concerts or performances that will have intermissions may want to plan ahead and have extra toilets on hand, for the rush periods. This can help keep lines down and make the attendees much happier.

It is important to consider any attendees who may need a wheelchair accessible toilet. At least one handicap accessible toilet at any event is ideal. There are some laws that may require you to have at least one available.

It is important to be safe rather than sorry when it comes to a shortage of toilets. Your guests will appreciate their needs being considered, and a good impression of your event.

How many portable restroom rentals do I need for my guests or patrons in attendance?
